ICE ROW BOATS.

Auburn and Syracuse Iceboatmen Form a Combination to Manufacture Them. The Syracuse Post says: "Benjamin J. Henley returned yesterday from a tour in Western New York, where he has been successful in arranging to give exhibitions of the swiftest ice rowboats that have ever been invented. Mr. Henley and his brother, William J. Henley, together with Edward Hinton and William Stansfield of Auburn, are preparing to place on the market what is believed will be a novelty and create a new winter pastime. For a number of years they have been working on the idea and believe that it is now the proper time to spring it.

"A strange coincidence, while the Syracuse men were studying and inventing their ice shell, the Auburn men were also busy with an ice rowboat, designed with the same object in view. The respective inventions have been patented and each possesses distinguishing points. The quartette of inventors, instead of trying to run each other out of existence, as many do, have decided to pool their issues and form a company for the sale and manufacture of ice shells.

"The idea that an ice rowboat was practical occurred to W. J. Henley fully ten years ago when he resided in Oswego. At that time S. T. Axtell and he designed and patented an oar to propel an ice boat. The matter was allowed to rest until now, when the same contrivance has been brought into use.

"The shell is shaped similarly to that of a water rowing shell without sides or bottom, and appears as if it were an unfinished water scull, showing the ribs and frame. The ice shell is 14 feet in length and 18 inches in width at the center, with the oar rigging projecting a suitable distance for ordinary rowing. There is a sliding seat as in the water shells. The frame work is of oak and the entire shell weighs only about 40 pounds.

"The propelling oars are six feet six inches in length and are composed of sections joined end to end by a longitudinally yielding splice and a spring for returning the section to its normal position. At the end of each oar are spurs, one for the ice and one for the man, and the third in the bow for steering purposes. The steering is done by the feet and the oar man faces the bow of the boat so that he looks constantly ahead. The power exerted on the oars, which, however, do not touch the ice nor project beyond the outrigger, is applied to a drum or wheel, the axle of which rest and travel on ways about thirty inches long (fastened to the deck of the boat near the bow).

"On the drum is wound a wire cable, which passes over wheels at each end of the boat and under it from bow to stern. On this cable is fastened a spur that engages in the axle at the beginning of the stroke and forces the boat along as the spur is pulled from the bow to the stern by the cable.

"The return movement of the oars easily unwinds the cable and brings the spur back for a new hold on the ice.

Death of William H. Manning. William H. Manning, the expressman, residing at No. 31 Mann street died late yesterday afternoon, of typhoid pneumonia after an illness of one week's duration.

His general countenance will be missed by a large number of people who have been in the habit of passing by his stand on Genesee street. He was a man who attended carefully to his business and was well liked by all who knew him. He was born in England. He came to this country and enlisted in the 75th Infantry Regiment, when 18 years of age and he served faithfully during the civil war. He has lived in Auburn for nearly 23 years.

Besides a widow, he leaves five sons, Edwin H. of Stamford, Conn., Franklin J. of William A. Nathan & Co. of Boston, G. of Auburn, Edwin H. arrived home last evening at 9:30 too late to see his father alive.

Funeral services will be held at the residence of the family No. 21 Mann street Monday at 1:30 p. m. Burial will be in Fort Hill.

Ex-Mayor Wheeler Escaped Injury. Ex-Mayor Wheeler was thrown out of his sleigh while driving this afternoon, but fortunately escaped injury. As his sleigh came around the corner of Oswego and Genesee streets, one of the runners caught on the rail of the electric road, the sleigh was overturned and Wheeler was thrown out. The horses were frightened and ran down John street a short distance, when they were stopped. Beyond a shaking up, Mr. Wheeler was not injured.

An Excellent Evening. The first in the Y. M. C. A. course of entertainments for the year was given last evening in the Genesee Opera house by the Winteritz Concert company. The house was well filled, showing that the people are awake at least to the excellence of the entertainments provided by the association. And it was a well pleased audience. The concert company was the best that has appeared in Auburn in years and the people were not slow to show their appreciation of it. Encores were the order of the evening. Merry songs, sang as sweetly as ever while Mr. Winteritz proved himself a master of the violin. The other members of the company were artists and it is safe to say that a better pleased crowd never attended a concert in this city. The entertainment is a fair sample of what the association has provided for Auburn for this season.
