That he will, as usual, acquit himself with credit, is a foregone conclusion with those who know what kind of a lad our young Auburnian is composed of.

DEATH OF AN ECENTRIC MILLIONAIRE. One of the oldest settlers of Cayuga county, Mr. William Green, of Genoa, but more familiarly known as "Billy," died on Saturday last, at his residence in that town, aged nearly ninety years. He settled in Genoa many years ago, at quite an early age, where he bought a large farm, and had since been engaged in continually adding to his lands, until he was the largest landed proprietor in the county—owning about seven-hundred acres of rich and productive soil, worth probably over three-quarters of a million. His successful agriculture earned him some other hundreds of thousands to cash, and his property is estimated at a million or more of dollars.

W. M. Cooley had the first green peas raised in the county, to-day, and now has new potatoes.

Sealed proposals for furnishing coal to the public schools are advertised for by the Supply Committee of the Board of Education, in this issue.

The last occasion of the kind was one of a very interesting character, and the exercises of the coming anniversary are expected to be still more pleasing to all who may attend.

By order of MICHAEL SULLIVAN, Capt. Com'd'g. R. JUDGE, Orderly. jelsbntf

There will be a special meeting of the C. L. & B. Association, at their rooms in the Seward Block, this (Tuesday) evening at nine o'clock, to make arrangements for attending the funeral of James A. Keeler. A full attendance is requested. By order of the President, THOS. DOANE, Secy. jelsbntf.

Having purchased the city trade of Chas. P. Barr for the Auburn City Mills flour, I wish to say to the old customers of the mill and my friends, that I am able to offer the best flour ever given in this market, at a large expense, for the manufacture of the Minnesota Hazell flour, which to-day are bringing two dollars more per barrel than the eastern markets than the best St. Louis Flour, or any Flour made from the best white wheat. It is much stronger Flour and is guaranteed to make from twenty-five to thirty pounds more bran to the barrel than the ordinary flour. Possessing this great strength, it is almost impossible for the poorest bread maker not to have a large, light loaf. I could add testimonials of parties who have tried it, and say they have never been its equal, but prefer the Flour should speak for itself, and only ask you to give it a trial. I shall also keep the celebrated Self Raising Flour (the only genuine Horsford's patent), Akron Oat Meal, Hominy, Graham and everything of the best quality in the line of trade.

N. B. I retail this Flour as low as other dealers sell ordinary brands. JAMES A. SUYDAM, 86 Genesee St. jelsbntf

TUESDAY EVEN'G, June 14. A special meeting of the Board of Education was held at the office of the Secretary last evening: Present—President Smith; Messrs. The object of the meeting was stated—viz: to discuss the question of contracting for the next year's supply of coal, the Supply Committee desiring instructions on that point.

After some discussion, on motion of Mr. Perry the Supply Committee were authorized to advertise for proposals for coal, if they should deem best, and make a contract for the same. Adjourned.

IN MEMORIAM—REV. T. G. MEACHEM.—Bishop Huntington, in his address to the Utica convention, paid a deserved tribute to the late T. G. Meachem, of this city:

Under a very lingering disease the Rev. Thomas G. Meachem had been borne down and kept in retirement for years; but not long enough to extinguish the lively and loving recollections of those who in his days of health, at Cortland and Waterville and elsewhere, had profited by his ministrations. All his confidential communications in his sickness breathed a spirit of patient submission. The sharp trial of a decline in the midst of the years commonly most serviceable, was met and borne with heroic Christian courage. By his devotion as chaplain, during the late war, and a skill in surgery acquired in his former profession, he did the country a service heartily appreciated by the officers of the army. His sufferings ended April 5th, at the home of his later years, in Auburn—a home where the most assiduous offices of family affection had sojourned and supported him to the last.

At THE HIGH SCHOOL.—Samuel B. Woolworth, L. D., of Albany, Secretary of the Board of Regents of the State University, who is on a tour of the State, visited the High School this morning, in company with several members of the Board of Education. He looked into the recitations of some of the classes, indicating much interest in their progress, and addressed the pupils and teachers in a pleasant manner. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Woolworth indicated that he was highly pleased with the workings of the school, and with the new building. He had not visited Auburn since the days of the old Academy, and he spoke of the pleasing contrast between that venerable structure and the present handsome and substantial building. His interest and encouraging words were exceedingly gratifying to the school.

A MYSTERY IN SING SING PRISON. A very morning, for many years, in fact, ever since her incarceration, Henrietta Robinson, the veiled murderess, has appeared with her cheeks beautifully painted. Every effort made to discover where she keeps the paint or from whom she obtains it has failed. Amid the closest watch and search of her person and cell she keeps her secret.—N. Y. Sun.

—Henrietta used to cultivate house plants, while at Sing Sing. The leaves of their flowers loaned their bloom to the handsome face of the "mysterious" lunatic, but she doesn't bloom in Sing Sing any more, being in the Auburn State Asylum for Insane Criminals.

DEATH OF JAS. A. KEELER.

The death of James A. Keeler is announced to-day. He was well known from his connection with the military, fire department and Celtic Society, and will be missed by many comrades in those organizations, who held him in high esteem for his generous and kindly nature and warm good fellowship. The Lawn Festival.

A VISIT TO "MELROSE"—PREPARATIONS FOR FRIDAY'S ENTERTAINMENT. Mr. Letchworth's charming villa presented a scene of unwonted animation yesterday afternoon, on the occasion of the meeting of the various committees of the approaching Lawn Festival. A large number of the ladies interested in the entertainment went up in carriages and looked over the grounds with the view of selecting the sites of the various tents, and making other necessary arrangements. A beautiful circular grass plot, thirty or forty feet in diameter, in front of the main entrance, was selected for the flower tent, which will be tastefully decorated and form one of the leading features of the festival. The lawn east of the house will be covered with the supper tent, in which about fifty persons will be accommodated at one time at the tables. Refreshment tables for ice cream, strawberries, cake and other light viands will be pitched southwest of the house. The lemonade stand will surround a large tree a short distance northwest of the house. Several hundred Chinese lanterns will be used to light up the grounds. The committee on decoration have secured a number of flags with which to adorn the house, and desire to secure more from those who are willing to lend them.

—The main entrance to the grounds will be at the south end of Seward Avenue, and the view from that point will be very picturesque. The horse railroad companies promise to furnish cars enough to carry all to the Seward Avenue terminus for four cents, from which point passengers may ride to "Melrose" in carriages for five cents.

Tickets for dancing may be obtained Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, at the book store of Mr. Frederick Allen. Price 50 cents.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Union. Mrs. O. E. Penoyar.

"Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee." Since the days that the apostles of Jesus spake thus to the lame man who sat daily at the Beautiful gate of the temple at Jerusalem, have there been many who have felt moved in like manner by the misfortunes or weaknesses of others, to lay their all upon the shrine of humanity. Silver and gold have I none, they say, but all the force and energy of my spiritual nature, all my love and sympathy and pity shall be thine, my brother and my sister, trusting by faith, in God's blessing on my feeble efforts, for thy welfare. And do such lose their reward, even if the world does not appreciate, if the extent of their self-sacrificing labors is never known? Within the inmost recesses of their spirit a satisfaction is felt which is a sufficient recompense.

Such were the aspirations, such the desires of her who recently passed from earth, and whose remains now rest beneath the shades of Fort Hill Cemetery. June, beautiful month of flowers, it was a fitting time for one so pure and gentle, to bid farewell to earth; the birds and summer zephyrs shall sing her requiem.

Mrs. O. E. Penoyar was the daughter of a Baptist clergyman; her mother died when she was but an infant, and she was adopted by a lady in Union Springs, who reared her as her own child. She married when quite young, her husband living but a few years, leaving her without means, the mother of two sons. The eldest died young. Here was the experience which so many women endure, a struggle for subsistence for herself and child; fortunately she had a taste for dressmaking, which was developed early, to this she resorted for a maintenance, working both in Union Springs and in this city, clothing and supporting both herself and son. And though she wrought with interest and zeal to beautify the persons of others, she spent but little time or money upon her own apparel.

Knowing her intimately, I often found her after the labors of the day were over, glad to retire from the superficialities in which she had been engaged, into the holy of holies of her own soul. Well do I remember walking with her five years ago in the streets of Boston. We were on our way to Faneuil Hall to attend a Woman's Convention. It was in this hallowed place, we listened for the first time, to addresses from Lucy Stone Blackwell, Julia Ward Howe, Mary A. Livermore and others; heard them advocate the dignity of labor, the right and utility of the fullest development, both physical and mental, both for man and woman, that when thus fortified and prepared they might go forth to labor for humanity. Those were grand truths she heard—announced that night from the old "Cradle of Liberty"; they were lullaby to her spirit; they gave her strength and inspiration, and when she returned to Auburn, those clarion tones still reverberated in her ears, it was woman's sphere to labor; it was woman's sphere to teach; how should she teach, what should she teach? She had been a Methodist in her earlier years, but while residing in Auburn she heard what she conceived to be a grander message. The Fatherhood of God, the final blessedness and happiness of all mankind, and she became a Universalist. But now comes the next thought, how can a man be holy or happy unless he be temperate? Here, then, she thought, is a field for work. The only organization at that time with which woman could labor for temperance was the order of Good Templars; she joined their ranks, and rapidly rose to the highest offices of trust and honor.

Her first public address was made in the Court House in this city, at a Sunday Temperance meeting, and since then she has spoken with great acceptance in several towns in this vicinity. She threw into these labors the whole of her rich thought, experience and refinement; forgetting fatigue and bodily weakness, her spirit became strong and triumphant.

Her son, for whom she had labored in faith and hope, had now become a bright, manly boy of fifteen, giving promise of usefulness and moral worth, when, as it will be remembered, last summer while recreating at Owego lake, he accidentally shot himself. From this affliction, Mrs. Penoyar already prostrated by nervous debility, could not rally, but gradually grew weaker and weaker until she passed away. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and purgeth every son whom he receiveth."

It seems as if her spirit must have questioned, and been answered as the poet has it: "Is this the way my Father? 'Tis my child, Thou must pass through this (tearful) hour, if thou wouldst reach the city, unadorned. Thy peaceful soul above."

"My Father! it is dark!" "Here take my hand, I'll lead thee through the hour, Thy bright spirit above."

"O Father! I'm weary." "Child lead thy hand, I'll lead thee through the hour, Thy bright spirit above."
