

BULLETIN NEWS.

Bartram comes next Tuesday. The number of convicts in Auburn prison is reduced to 806. Bartram, Jumbo and the white elephant in Auburn next Tuesday. Donald Judson, of this city, was married on Tuesday to Miss Fannie Yawger, of Union Springs, at the bride's house.

Bartram's Boat and Midget.

Bartram's show was in Syracuse, yesterday, and the Courier says: "Of the absolute superiority of the Baum and London show over all others, there can be no question. There is in every feature an utter absence of cheapness and shoddy and everything bears the mark of the most liberal expenditure of money and the exercise of the most discriminating skill in the executive management. At the afternoon performance the mammoth tents were crowded and the vast audience was more than delighted with the exhibition. Bartram's Ethnological Congress is a new and a most instructive feature of the show. It is a collection of representatives of wild and barbaric nations in the least known and most savage tribes of the world are exhibited. The fierce Zulu warrior appears in full fighting array, his swarthy skin only half covered by furs and feathers. Hindostan is represented by groups of high and low caste Hindoos. Besides these are Nubians from the upper Nile. Today Indians from East Indies, thought to be the descendants of the lost tribes of Israel. Aztecs from Mexico, the only representatives of that extinct race, and a band of Nauch dancing girls from the valley of the Indus. All these are arrayed in the characteristic garments of their nation, and from them the best ideas may be gathered of the appearance of the inhabitants of these far away countries. The sacred white elephant proved a great attraction and a genuine curiosity. It is unnecessary to speak in detail of the circus or of the races. We can only say that they were the best ever seen at Syracuse, and can be seen only at Bartram's. The entire show was unprecedent in merit and immensity. The people will not see it like until Bartram comes around again."

County News.

Frank M. Parsons says that he is not a candidate for anything. Some of his friends would like to have him become District Attorney. Rev. Mr. Morrison has resigned the pastorate of the Baptist church at Weedsport. Fed Hudson has returned to Dakota, and was accompanied by Miss Hattie Dixon who goes to visit her sister, Mrs. W. K. Dalia. Friday evening the Republicans organized a Blaine and Logan Club in Weedsport. The following are the officers: F. M. Mack, president; C. M. Elliott, E. M. Stevens, James Wright, John Welch, Eliaha Lamphere, G. H. Weyant, B. E. Sheldon, Stephen Cottle, E. A. Havens and Milton Bode, vice presidents; William Kelly and C. M. Adams, secretaries; F. H. Bennett, corresponding secretary; A. H. Todd, treasurer; F. M. Parsons, J. P. Austin, M. J. Braman, executive committee; A. B. Barmon, C. M. Henderson and John Keenan finance committee.

A Remarkable History.

Among all the women I have ever known the Baroness Von Xanthus, of Buda-Pesth, in Hungary, stands out as the one possessing the most remarkable history both for romance, pathos and prominence. Her life is a record of her story as I was when she told it to me and as I observed in a visit I made her in 1878, at her house in Pesth. To begin I must simply state that it smacks more of romance than reality, and it is but the romance of reality; and all the romance of it grew out of the political and financial troubles in Hungary when Kossuth was banished and came to this country. At that time the present Baroness was a young girl of only sixteen, and James von Xanthus was hardly twenty, and yet they loved each other well. She was of a family that took part with the conquering country and the young Baron had already allied himself to the patriots who fought with them, and when Kossuth was banished he was also arrested, but was offered his freedom and his wife if he would turn traitor to his principles. The young couple were left alone for a short time, in the hope that the love they bore for each other would cause him to cede, and as he was of a very influential family of Hungarians it was desired that he should; but the two lovers employed their time in nursing each other for sacrifice and in mingling their tears and vows of constancy till death; and then, when the parents found that all was in vain, they gave him up angrily and he was exiled with Kossuth and came to this country. No letters could pass between the young lovers and the daughter was hidden to forget him, and every effort was made to induce her to marry, but no threats nor entreaties prevailed; she persisted firmly in her refusal to listen to any one, and to pass the lonesome years she began to write and to paint, as well as to devote much of her time to the study of natural history.

A Pair of Good Feeders.

Two well-dressed, gentlemanly looking men entered Dooner's Hotel recently and said they would like some dinner. One of the men was about 5 feet 6 inches in height, weighed probably 150 pounds, and carried in front of him a comfortable-looking and well-rounded paunch. He said his name was Stevenson and that he was a druggist doing business in Bridgeport, Conn. The other man was evidently a German. He was a tall, healthy-looking fellow, slightly inclined to adiposity, but by no means what could be called a fat man. "I wish," said Mr. Stevenson to Mr. Dooner, "that you would see personally about the serving of our meal. We had a hearty breakfast six hours ago, but are hungry now." he continued, very calmly, "five pounds of cold roast beef, rare; let it be all solid meat, without bones or fat. Give me a double order of peas, a double order of corn, a double order of macaroni." "All right," said Mr. Dooner, smilingly who thought his guests were joking, "but will you not have something to wash that meal down with?" "Yes," replied the little Bridgeport druggist, "it would be well. Let me have two bottles of Bass's ale, and while you are giving the order send me a double order of whatever vegetables there are in the house."

Grand Larceny in Prison.

Silas LeFevre, Urban S. Beaudette and John McAlpine, all of this city, are under arrest for participation in a piece of wholesale larceny in which Dunn, Barber & Co., the prison shoe contractors, are the losers of goods to the value of $10,000. LeFevre was a teamster employed at the prison horse shop and the stolen goods, comprising finished boots and shoes as well as prepared parts of those articles, were carried by him, concealed in his wagon, to the other parties, outside the prison walls. Beaudette is a shoemaker and McAlpine is a painter and popular member of the fire department.

The Congressional Nomination.

The Wayne Democratic Press has this, of the coming congressional struggle, which would seem to imply that right over there in Lyons is where congressional nominees are made: "Congressman Payne, of Auburn, was in town on Monday consulting with local politicians upon his chances for a re-nomination this fall. He will go through the entire county before returning. Congressman Nutting, of Oswego, who desires a re-nomination, is billed to appear in Lyons next week. Judge Collins is being pushed for Representative in Congress by men who until recently have been his bitterest enemies. There is but one construction to place upon their action: a desire to get him out of the way for a certain Lyons man who wants the office of County Judge, as a stepping stone to the Supreme Court Judgeship later on. We are of the opinion that Judge Collins will not take the bait."

Death of Mrs. Horace T. Cook.

One of the saddest events lately chronicled in Auburn is the death, occurring at 6 o'clock Sunday morning, of the wife of the veteran county treasurer, Horace T. Cook. The lady was one of a party who left Auburn over the Southern Central, Saturday afternoon, to attend an entertainment at the summer villa of Howard Case, near Ensenore. On the way up the road Mrs. Case remarked to a friend that she had never felt so well in her life; but after being at the villa some little time she suddenly complained of a terrible pain in her head and turning to one of the party said "I believe I am going to die." The next moment she fell unconscious to the floor. Physicians and friends were summoned from Auburn by telephone and came upon a special car and the patient was taken back to the city also on a special. All attempts to rally her proved unsuccessful and after remaining unconscious through the night she passed away at the hour named. Her death was due to a severe paralytic stroke. Mrs. Cook was a woman of exceptionally sunny and genial disposition and had a host of warmly attached friends who will feel themselves, with the afflicted husband, personally bereaved. She was a constant attendant at the First Presbyterian church, and a woman of many good works in and out of the church.

Death of Capt. Titus.

Edgar H. Titus died at the residence of his father, Samuel Titus, 24 South street, Tuesday evening, after a brief period of total prostration from a trouble which had beset him for some little time previously. Mr. Titus was born in Ballston, Saratoga county, in May, 1842, and came to Auburn in 1855. He was one of the very first volunteers for the civil war, enlisting under Col. T. J. Kennedy in the old 19th infantry and serving throughout the struggle. While fortunately escaping the dangers of wounding or imprisonment, he found opportunity to distinguish himself and rose from the ranks to the position of Captain, and the 19th infantry becoming the 3d artillery, he was placed in command of Battery F. Later he was identified with the national guard of this state and was captain of the Willard Guards in the 49th regiment of this city. After the war Capt. Titus held several clerical positions in this city and was at one time a resident of Syracuse. He was recently called from the position of time-keeper at the Southern Central offices to accept the position of deputy to Postmaster Woodruff, which place he held at the time of his death. Mr. Titus was a man of many general qualities and consequently of many friends. He was a charter member of Auburn Lodge No. 2523, Knights of Honor, and was also a brother in St. Paul's Lodge F. & A. M. With the K. of H. he held up to the present year the office of reporter and financial reporter. His wife, who died long ago, was the daughter of Samuel F. Oakley, of Lewis street, and by his death two young children, Miss Pearl and remaining parent, were left of their only.

Death of a Sharp.

George W. Burgess died at the hospital at Auburn Prison, yesterday morning, aged 67 years. Since his last arrival at the institution, for he was an old prison bird, he has been confined to the hospital by paralysis and his death was expected to occur at any time. Burgess was a sharper of the keenest sort and his various tricks to prison were all made on account of his tricks in false pretense and forgery. His last sentence was put into execution in December, 1883, and the cause of his arrest and conviction was an operation which came near demonstrating the truth of his own assertions, that on a capital of $5 a man could start a bank. The story of this affair though of local interest, has never appeared in print and was related by himself substantially as follows: Having been discharged from Auburn prison with a few dollars in his pocket, he proceeded to the banking house of Seward & Co., and there procured a blank check form which he filled out and to which he attached the name of a wealthy Auburnian. With this check, then, duly endorsed, he went to the Auburn savings bank and representing that he intended to settle here in the cattle business he offered the check and his small stock of money as the beginning of a bank account. Burgess being a stranger, the bank officials made some demur, but the old man laughed them down good naturedly and told such a consistent and plausible story that his deposit was accepted and a bank-book given him. He then took himself to Lockport and visiting a bank in that city delivered himself of another clever story, ending with the proposal that his bank-book be accepted there, that he be given half of the amount called for in cash and that the Lockport bank then draw on the Auburn bank for the amount. This arrangement was effected, but in the meantime the forgery in Auburn had been discovered and Burgess was in or out demand. He was caught, convicted and sent back to Auburn in December, as above remarked. Burgess was a wanderer upon the earth and it cannot be discovered that he has friends or people. His remains will therefore go to the prison burying ground.

The Wrong Woman.

At one time there lived in Ithaca a pension agent known as Judge Rowe, and upon his death the business was continued by his widow, Mrs. Fannie Rowe Adams of this city. The case was placed in the hands of Deputy U. S. Marshal Bennett, of Weedsport, who found and arrested Anna Rowe at Skinner's Eddy, in Pennsylvania, and has brought her to this city where the charge will be investigated. The case has been set down for examination this afternoon.

On Monday evening a Blaine and Logan club was organized at Fair Haven.

A Fatal Fall.

A telegram was received by his friends that Emmitt Gillispie, formerly of this city, fell in Springfield, Ohio and was killed thereby, and that his remains might be expected to arrive in this city. He was a son of James K. Gillispie, and well known in this city. During the past five years Mr. Gillispie had suffered severely from asthma, and getting some better, he left about six weeks ago for Ohio to work at his trade, that of a salaried engineer, and when this was greatly improved in health, and there seemed to be bright prospects before him. About two weeks ago his wife joined him in Ohio. She has the sympathy of all in this hour of sad bereavement.

A Well-Known Name.

A resident of the West End recently employed a colored gentleman to clear the winter accumulation of ashes from his cellar, and the job being well done, he summoned the Georgetown to his presence, commended his work and intimated the possibility of further employment. "Glad to take you" replied the said ash-handler, with a satisfied grin. "And what is your name?" asked the employer. "George Washington," was the complacent answer. "George Washington?" inquired, quizzically. "Seems to me I have heard that name before." The darky's eyes rolled and his ivory glistened as he delivered the crushing answer: "Golly, boss, think you order heard it befo'. Ise been hollerin' ashes round 'ere dese ten years.—Boston Traveller.

Investigating a Railroad.

Two or three days ago, while the Wisconsin Legislature was in session, a member gave notice that he would introduce a bill to investigate the affairs of a certain railroad corporation. Two or three days after he was hunted up by an officer of the road, who said: "I see that you intend to investigate our road?" "Yes, sir." "Ah, yes; in which direction, may I ask will your investigation lead?" "Why, I want to see if there is any way I can get the road to pass my old woman down and back from Oshkosh?" "There probably was, at least the bill was never heard from further.—Wall Street News.
